A TALK BY
Dinaw Mengestu
Award-Winning Author and Journalist

Dinaw Mengestu came to the U.S. with his family from Ethiopia at the age of 2. Since earning his MFA at Columbia University in 2005, he has published three novels, all of them New York Times Notable Books, including his most recent, All Our Names. A 2012 MacArthur Foundation Fellow, Mengestu is the recipient of a Lannan Fiction Fellowship, a Guardian First Book Award, a Los Angeles Times Book Prize, and numerous other awards.

Also a freelance journalist who has reported from sub-Saharan Africa about life in Darfur, northern Uganda, and eastern Congo, Mengestu has had his work published in Harper’s, Granta, Rolling Stone, The New Yorker, and The New York Times.
